Brass Dagger

This dagger was obtained by trading from the Oscray, a new race who came to Malatra from the skies. It does normal dagger damage, but is made of a shiny brown substance known as brass. It is sharp, and retains the sharpness much longer than a wooden or bone dagger.

Brass Headdress

This brass circlet fits snugly on your brow. It is the symbol of the defeat of Backbiter, an evil Oscray who came from across the skies to threaten the existence of three villages. For your help in this crisis, you were awarded this trophy as a symbol of your courage. It is readily recognized in the village of the Rudra, the Koshiva, and the Katimaya. (+1 reaction roll in any of these villages).

Farseer Glass

This strange tube allows you to look through it and see as though you had an eagle's eye. You can see things as though they were 5 times as close as they really are. The tube is made of a brownish substance called brass, inside is a substance as transparent as water, in fact even more so. It is an artifact that came from across the skies, with the Oscray when they came to the jungle of Malatra. It was presented to you by their chieftain, Bentfang, in gratitude for your help.

Gem of Fascination

This extremely rare gem was gifted to you by Bentfang, chieftain of the Oscray. He presented it to you for your help in freeing his people from the attentions of his brother, Backbiter. It is large and beautiful. It has no magic properties, but is quite fascinating to those who like gems and shiny objects. Saru and monkey katanga in particular prize this stone, and should react in a more favorable manor to the wearer (+3 to Nhero saru and monkey katanga reactions, heroes' reactions are up to them.)
